Landscape 20

Driveway and House Approach, Bury St Edmunds, Suffolk

In order to be assured of achieving outstanding results, Mark Richardson of Stewart Landscape Construction, opted for Landscape20 as his topsoil of choice for the transformation of the driveway and approach for a house located in Bury St Edmunds, Suffolk.

The main design considerations for DeakinLock were to create a grander approach to the house, whilst retaining the views across the park, along with a simple, contemporary garden that has sympathy with the architecture of the house.

500 tonnes of Landscape 20 was utilised for this project which won the 'Association of Professional Landscapers Supreme Winner' category at their 2014 awards ceremony.

Landscape20 was used in the areas where a semi-mature hornbeam hedge was saved and 18 seven meter high Tilia cordata were planted to create the avenue, along with eight box head specimens for the drive approach

Mark commented that 'Having successfully used Landscape20 for over 10 years I knew that I would get high quality consistent topsoil'.
